Recently, the counselors of the school conducted a fun filled session to infuse the understanding of each of the application components, and the selection criterion. The GPA (Grade Point Average) Game is a fun, mock-admission simulation for students. The purpose of the game is to create awareness of the many factors that are considered in college admission decisions. After the game, the counselors sensitized the students, "Colleges are not looking for any one type of student. They look for accomplished students who bring a lot to the admission's table. You can see that decisions are made by a combination of objective and subjective factors, and these factors often differ in importance from one college to the next."
